It's Not All in the Delivery: Perfecting Your Presentations	Whether you're a veteran presenter or you are a novice, developing presentations can be daunting. However it's something you have to do, whether it's a conference, staff or board meeting, or high school night. Putting your best foot forward includes more than just delivering a presentation. Research on the subject matter is the first step but that's only the beginning. You'll need to ensure your presentation is visually appealing, engaging and informative. How to do capture and keep your audience's attention? How do you ensure the theme and/or message is carried throughout the presentation? How much content do you put on the slide? How do your structure the presentation so that it flows well? Join us as we share how to turn an average presentation into a spectacular one. Teaching the Teacher: What Students Need to Know about Their Finances	Your students have arrived on campus not knowing how to budget, how credit cards work, or the impact of interest. You want to educate them but where do you begin? Instead of starting from scratch, we will provide you with what your students need to know about their finances. Presented by accredited financial counselors, this session is designed to teach the teacher so that you can create and tailor your own financial literacy program. We will also share ways to keep students engaged.	GLHEC	4/3/18	12:00 PM	https://schools.mygreatlakes.org/web/FAP/training/findAvailableEvents?selected=training&navMenuItemSelected=hoz.findEvent
Strategies for Shrinking Student Loan Debt	Making equal monthly payments is the typical method that many borrowers follow to pay off their student loans. The repayment term is 10, 20, or even 30 years for some—which can feel like a lifetime of paying college debt. Too often, loan debt can prevent borrowers from proceeding with important life events such as starting a family, purchasing a home, or pursuing their desired career. Student loan debt shouldn't be the obstacle that impedes these pursuits. There are strategies that can help borrowers shrink their debt so they can unlock the full economic benefit of their college education. Attend this session to learn more about these strategies so that you share them with the students you serve. Cast the Net: Increasing Student Engagement with Financial Literacy	You've developed an informative yet captivating financial literacy program—however how do you get students' attention and interest in learning? One of the biggest obstacles schools have with financial literacy programs is student engagement. Studies show that financial education help students make wise decisions about money and credit but if they don't participate, it's not effective. During this webinar, you'll hear our guest presenter from the University of Central Florida share how they got students involved—in just one year. We'll show you how to cast the net so that you can increase student engagement and get the most out of your financial literacy program. Full Minds, Empty Stomachs: Food Insecurity on Campus	As part of our Financial Capability Month series, Inceptia explores the growing epidemic of students going hungry on campus. In this one hour webinar, we'll discuss how food insecurity happens in such a food-rich environment, and how going hungry impacts every area of life for these students. Utilizing a body of growing research, we'll look at how some institutions are working to tackle this problem head on. Finally, we'll hear from one school on what it takes to open and run a campus food pantry, as they provide insights from their first year of operation. Situations of Student Loan Borrowers	Do you know what to do if a student loan borrower experiences an unfortunate situation such as incarceration or death? What happens if you put too much on the lender verification certificate for a federal consolidation loan or more loans need to be added once it's completed? What should you do if a student exceeds their aggregate limit? You may only face these situations on occasion but when you do, it's helpful to know what to do and where to go. This webinar was designed to help you resolve these issues so that you don't have to expend too much valuable time.
